Sid is arrogant, magnificent, fallible, virtuous, [illegible] right and is self-righteous. He finds a peer only in Kennedy. One just in step with both is always, stupid, usually a always wrong, untruthful, and has many other failings & weaknesses of character or intellect that are efficient to the meeting which can always be made appropriate to Sid's immediate needs. Thus when Nixon was [illegible] doubtful of U.S. eligibility to [illegible] (pp 524-6) and not particularly like Kennedy, him / what is displaying "interest & sincerity with Mrs. K, to [illegible] Kennedy he became a hypocrite & a man "who had stayed around the long" - but did Sid say?
